

As a DSL broadband customer, I feel that it is important for FCC to continue its regulation over the broadband market because there currently is not enough competition in this market. The market has done very well so far with the exploding broadband revolution thus far; please do not change this policy that can hinder its growth by reducing competition, putting small businesses out of business, and limiting consumer choice, all of which can only lead to higher prices and economic problems. Thank you.

Mark K. Kim
Graduate Student, USC
Department of Computer Science